COLUMBIA FALLS--

A special noncredit workshop and a three-credit course entitled "The Writing Road to Reading," focusing on a simple and direct method for basic and unified teaching of reading, writing and spelling, will be presented Oct. 18-29 in the Columbia Falls Junior High School Building.

The noncredit workshop will meet from 1-3:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, and the three-credit, graduate or undergraduate course will be from 7-9:30 p.m. weekdays. The three-credit course also will include a session from 8 a.m.-noon Saturday, Oct. 23.

The special workshop and course, designed for Columbia Falls area teachers and parents, are sponsored by the Reading Reform Foundation, and the Center for Continuing Education and Summer Programs of the University of Montana, Missoula.

Oma Riggs, supervisor and teacher trainer of the Early Childhood and Elementary Reading Program, Harlem, N.Y., will present the programs, which are designed after Romalda Spalding's "Writing Road to Reading." Ms. Riggs will be available throughout the workshop and course for individual counseling and special consultation.

The Spalding Method approaches the logical understanding of the English language by involving all sensory channels to the brain in the training process.

Cost of enrolling in the workshop is $20. Fee for the course totals $63. Fees will be collected at the first class meetings Monday, Oct. 18.

Additional information may be obtained by contacting Cinda L. Purdy, Center for Continuing Education and Summer Programs, Room 107, Main Hall, University of Montana, Missoula, Mont. 59812 (phone 243-2900), or Adelaide Foy, Assistant Elementary Principal, Box 1166, Columbia Falls, Mont. 59912 (phone 892-4137).
